LAST SAD RITES.

Lay in Away the Remains of Dr. Cronin

CHICAGO, May 26th.-Detective Connelley asserted that the man for whom he hired the buggy at Dinan's livery stable on the night of May 4th was Smith, Rifea, Croonin, Michigan, with whom he had been acquainted.

But never had he known anything of the white horse that he had seen at Dinan's livery stable. He never had a horse from Dinan at Connelley's suggestion. He has never been back to Hancock, Michigan, and had no letter from Connelley's brother there. He had not been to New Mexico, as stated by Connelley. It is asserted that Connelley, who was a resident of Chicago, was the man who was hired to bring the horse to the city.

UNFAIR COMPETITION.

The San Francisco Call quotes the New York Times and the Boston Herald as saying that if the American transcontinental roads suffer by the competition of the Canadian road, the shippers are the gainers. The journal last named protests that any interference with this competition will affect Boston commercial interests badly. What sort of a view is this to take of a national question? Of course the unequal competition benefits a few, but the question to consider is how does it affect the whole country? The answer is, uniformly, by those who have examined into the question, "disastrously." Neither Boston nor New York can afford to have the transcontinental roads depreciated or ruined. Those commercial centers are intimately concerned in their maintenance, and in the upholding of their earning capacity. But more than all others, the intermediate commercial interests are interested. If by reason of the competition of the British road the through business of the Pacific roads is to be stripped from them, they must be maintained, if at all, upon the charges laid upon those shippers who cannot avail of the Canadian competition. But this is not all; the competition is not a fair one. It lies in the face of all commercial law and custom. The Canadian road is not an equal competitor because it is an untaxed road in the first place and received its material duty free, and is in the second place backed, supported, and its every interest zealously promoted by one of the strongest nations of the earth, to which it pays no tribute, and which has subsidized it with a liberality unprecedented in history, and which subsidizes it not called upon to repay nor so much as meet the interest upon. To say that in the face of such a competitor the American roads must "take care of themselves," is simply to throw up our hands in front of the British Government and bid it come on and do the business of this country without let, hindrance or tax. It is not yet three years since this munificently endowed, tax-free, duty-free, Government-supported road bid for the carrying trade of the Orient as against the American roads, but such inroads have already been made that no special provision is needed to foresee the early date when we will have lost the trade entirely. American pride, if nothing else, should be concerned, and if that fails American self-interest must come to the rescue. The local traffic of the American roads must never be saddled with the cost of the through traffic—such an idea is absurd, the American sense of common justice forbids it, but that calamity will befall the local shippers on the American roads if the unequal competition of the Canadian Pacific is fostered by our own Government, as at present. The Call puts the question only mildly, when it says:

It is a serious thing to the nation at large that an important branch of traffic should pass into the hands of foreigners. When traffic of this kind goes to a foreign country, it is hard to put it out of them. If the wool shippers from Boston begin to take the Canadian line as a natural channel, and of domestic movement of the eastward and of domestic movement of the westward, it will be difficult hereafter to restore them to the American lines. It is not necessary to demonstrate to our Eastern contemporaries that it is not to the public advantage that the interchange of commodities between the East and West should be conducted through a British channel, or that the tea and sugar trade should go to Japan, or that the Canadian Pacific should go to Japan through the Dominion. We have ports and lines of our own, and it is the duty of the Government to see that the conduct of this business without traveling into foreign ports.

The East is probably not aware of the inroads which the Canadian Pacific has already made on our commerce. In the six months ending December 31, 1888, the Canadian Pacific carried 13,562,565 pounds of tea eastward, as against 19,533,245 pounds in 1887—a loss of 22 per cent. While in the same year, 1888, the Canadian Pacific carried 13,562,565 pounds of tea, as against 2,900,000 pounds in 1887—a loss of 77 per cent. So with the west-bound trade. During the same period, the Canadian Pacific carried 3,625,000 pounds of "domestic" mail in New England and consigned to China, but in the six months ending December 31, 1888, the amount carried over that line was 5,551,000 pounds, or an increase of 51 per cent. The one thing that more than all else will withdraw sympathy from the Irish cause is the apparent inability of the Irish to agree among themselves. The murder of Dr. Cronin, it is now admitted was the crime of Irishmen, and one of the leaders of one of the Irish associations is out in a statement denying that any of the members of his society had anything to do with the killing, but admitting that the Doctor was killed by Irishmen. The Cronin case will have the effect of withdrawing for a considerable time at least, a great amount of American sympathy from the Irish cause. The American people will not countenance any movement for so-called reform, that finds it necessary to resort to infamous means to accomplish its ends.

The confidence that the American yachtsmen felt in their ability to defeat the Valkyrie must be now somewhat shaken, since the Dunraven boat has achieved two victories over a fleet of yachts, and in light winds. If she sails well in other waters and in strong breezes, we may have a surprise in store for us.

Bismarck's persistent demands for indemnity from the Samoans are not sincere. He well knows no such concessions will be made. He pushes the demand simply to cushion the fall of German pride.

We submit that the issue of the SUNDAY UNION of yesterday was a model. It was in every essential a clean, helpful, newsy and satisfying journal.

REV. DR. FILLEN ON "MEMORIES OF THE REBELLION."

An Interesting Discourse On an Appropriate Subject—Dr. Massey's Sermon Yesterday.

At the Central M. E. Church last night three, Rev. Thomas Fillen, preached a sermon appropriate to Memorial Day. The text was: "Ye shall teach them to your children." He said: We pause as people, after a year, to recall the memories of the most memorable conflict perhaps of all history, as we carry garlands to cover the graves of our soldier braves who fell in the strife. Circumstances make the occasion a day of mourning. They are strange memories that we recall with their recounting cannot yet go without a show of feeling. It is history we recall, not in rancor and resentment, but in warning and for encouragement. It was in wartime and wisdom to let them die. What a vision they bring. War, always terrible, came clothed to us with double terror. We were a people of peace and the first dark coming of the spirit of war and violence was to leave the arm of countrymen against countryman, almost of brother against brother. No wonder that the masses hailed the federal proclamation of the recently raised to authority by our system shuddered at the responsibilities we were settling down upon them with the relentless certainty of fate, as the long brooded national dangers quickened prior life.

O the memory of those dark hours prior to the precipitation of the conflict! Those days when that which was most loved of all men met at the North, and most prized of us all, North and South, now lying in the balance, as one State after another declared itself out of the Union. And one after another of our Southern people, our countrymen, almost of brother against brother. No wonder that the masses hailed the federal proclamation of the recently raised to authority by our system shuddered at the responsibilities we were settling down upon them with the relentless certainty of fate, as the long brooded national dangers quickened prior life.

The war was great in the size of its armies, in the number of life and treasure. When Grant became Lieutenant General of all the forces of the Union he commanded more men than any other General in the history of the world. He was a man of the people, and they were mainly volunteers. This is one of the greatest memories of the war, the splendid and spontaneous response of the nation's citizenry to the call for help in the hour of need. That April day when the stars and stripes lifted on every hillside of the North, and the President spoke the long columns of war began to move as if they were even before the war had begun. In the hours closing the day of the battle, other calls were made and the thousands cried: "We are coming, Father Abraham." We are coming, Father Abraham. The composition of the Union for business is thus not an ordinary competition which would policy might make in the interests of the shipper and consumer; it is a rivalry between the United States and the British Empire, and on the other a Government with Great Britain at its back.

THE DIVINE FATHERHOOD.

Synopsis of a Sermon Delivered Yesterday by Rev. Dr. Massey.

At the services of the First Unitarian Society yesterday, Rev. Dr. Massey spoke from 2 Corinthians xiv, 18: "And I will receive you and will be a father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

The speaker said that there is probably no belief regarded as fundamental in the Christian religion that requires adjustment so much to bring it into conformity with modern modes of thought as that which is outlined in the verses just quoted. To conceive of the power which rules the universe as Providence and not as fate, and to clothe that Providence with attributes bespeaking so much of intelligence, of thankfulness and of tenderness that no word in our vocabulary so aptly describes it as "father," is to be counted as the crowning glory of Christianity.

No other system of belief or practice had had underlying it any such profound and comprehensive apprehension of spiritual things, or at least, if such an idea may be discerned as nascent in some earlier system, the announcement of it had never arisen to such majestic expression as in the teachings of the Nazarene.

In the two dominating philosophies of the ancient worlds stoicism and epicurean-ism, there was no such sublime conception of parental love penetrating the order of the universe. It is true that the philosophers thought greatly misapprehends these philosophies and does not understand what a sublime and beautiful thing it is to have a child. It is true that the philosophers thought greatly misapprehends these philosophies and does not understand what a sublime and beautiful thing it is to have a child. It is true that the philosophers thought greatly misapprehends these philosophies and does not understand what a sublime and beautiful thing it is to have a child.

There is an inspiring suggestiveness in the thought that to goodness the universe is fluid, and that moral power dominates even in the physical world. But when we attempt to carry this thought further, and speculate upon the nature of the moral realm that men who are not churchmen often look upon his character and attribute to him intellectual insight and miraculous power, endowments far beyond the ordinary possessions of men, so that he remains forever the unique figure in all history.

The massive towers of the Cologne Cathedral rise heavenward, and may be held as typical of the moral realm. The character of man's faith; but the mighty buttresses which hold the mighty pile in the position are not the material structure, but the moral structure, that is to say, the moral realm that men who are not churchmen often look upon his character and attribute to him intellectual insight and miraculous power, endowments far beyond the ordinary possessions of men, so that he remains forever the unique figure in all history.

The cry, however, is not so much "repent as believe." In the higher walks of life, the lapse for mortality is not so alarming as it is frequently pictured. From a profound study of nature, men have come to proclaim it as a wonderful teacher of morality. They find that the moral realm that men who are not churchmen often look upon his character and attribute to him intellectual insight and miraculous power, endowments far beyond the ordinary possessions of men, so that he remains forever the unique figure in all history.

What the Ex-State Engineer Says About the Dual Duties.

In an interview with a reporter on the San Francisco Chronicle, Wm. Ham, Hall, member of the State River Commission, and recently appointed on the Government Irrigation Survey Corps, has made the following statement regarding the controversy over the matter of his holding two positions:

"Saying," said the Ex-State Engineer, "that I have not yet received the notice of my engagement on the general Government work, and that I have until now been acting as a private citizen, it is premature to say what my views of the matter are, or to say what I shall finally do. The first step, however, is to lay the matter in writing before the Governor. Waterman and the Director of the United States Geological Survey. I have not yet had an opportunity to do so, and the error in San Diego, or was there two days ago, when I last heard of him. The opinion of the State Engineer, as the Governor, is in the hands of the Governor, of which mention is made in Sacramento dispatches, I presume, an address to the Governor on the 23d, and I have now in my possession, in reply to an official inquiry made by me on the 21st. I shall lay this opinion before the Governor, and in a statement of the facts. As I can say now is that in the light of this opinion, and my present knowledge of the facts with respect to the engagement, I would not now be in a position to be criticized as violating any law or provision of our State Constitution, even though my engagement on the Government work had now commenced. As to whether or not the duties of the two positions are incompatible, I am not sure, but I judge that on the part of the State before the necessity arises for deciding the matter. I think it is right that the State should be able to do work which is of benefit to the people, and I think it is right that the State should be able to do work which is of benefit to the people."
